RABBI'S FORUM

Rabbi Anthony Fratello
MAHL, DD

As we approach Hanukkah and the close of another year, we are reminded that this special season is about much more than lighting candles, enjoying Latkes and Sufganiyot, and celebrating with family and friends. Hanukkah is a story of faith, perseverance, resilience, and hope. These themes seem especially meaningful as our congregation continues its journey toward the completion of our sanctuary renovation project.

The story of Hanukkah reminds us that even when the road ahead is uncertain, faith and determination can carry us forward. The Maccabees faced tremendous obstacles, yet they remained committed to restoring their sacred space and preserving the traditions that defined their community. The miracle of the oil reminds us that sometimes things take longer than expected, but with patience and perseverance, wonderful things can happen.

Our own sanctuary renovation has certainly tested our patience. What we anticipated would be a more straightforward process has experienced delays and unexpected challenges. We understand that many members are eager to enjoy worship in the familiar surroundings that hold so many memories. We share that excitement and look forward to the day when our congregation can gather once again in our revitalized spiritual home.

While delays can be frustrating, it is important to remember why we began this journey. We are investing not simply in a building, but in the future of our congregation. Our sanctuary is where we celebrate life's milestones, welcome new generations, remember loved ones, observe our holidays, and come together in worship and reflection. It is a place filled with memories, meaning, and the spirit of our Community.

We sincerely appreciate the patience, understanding, and support our members have demonstrated throughout this process. We also recognize that construction delays can create inconvenience and uncertainty. Please know that our goal remains to complete the project properly and thoughtfully, ensuring that the finished sanctuary will serve our congregation for many years to come.

As we light the Hanukkah candles, adding another flame each evening, we can think of each candle as representing something important: Patience, understanding, commitment, community, and hope. Just as the light grows brighter with every passing night, so too does our anticipation of what lies ahead.

As this year comes to an end, let us focus not only on what remains unfinished, but also on what we have accomplished together and the exciting possibilities before us. Our congregation's greatest strength has never been its walls or furnishings. It has always been the people who fill it with warmth, friendship, faith, and love.

From all of us at Temple Shaarei Shalom, our best to you and yours for a bright, happy, joyous Hanukkah. And may your New Year be filled with all manner of blessings!

What can we learn when we look at the Bible through the eyes of its women? Quite a lot, as it turns out! In our class, Portraits of Biblical Women, we explore the lives and legacies of women whose stories have shaped Jewish history, tradition, and imagination. We look beyond the familiar narratives to discover the complexities, courage, challenges, and voices of women who don't always get the attention they deserve.

Together, we approach each woman from a variety of perspectives: beginning with the original biblical text, then exploring rabbinic midrash, Second Temple literature (538 B.C.E.-70 C.E.), and the insights of modern scholars and writers. Each layer offers something new, sometimes confirming what we thought we knew and sometimes challenging us to see these women in an entirely different light.

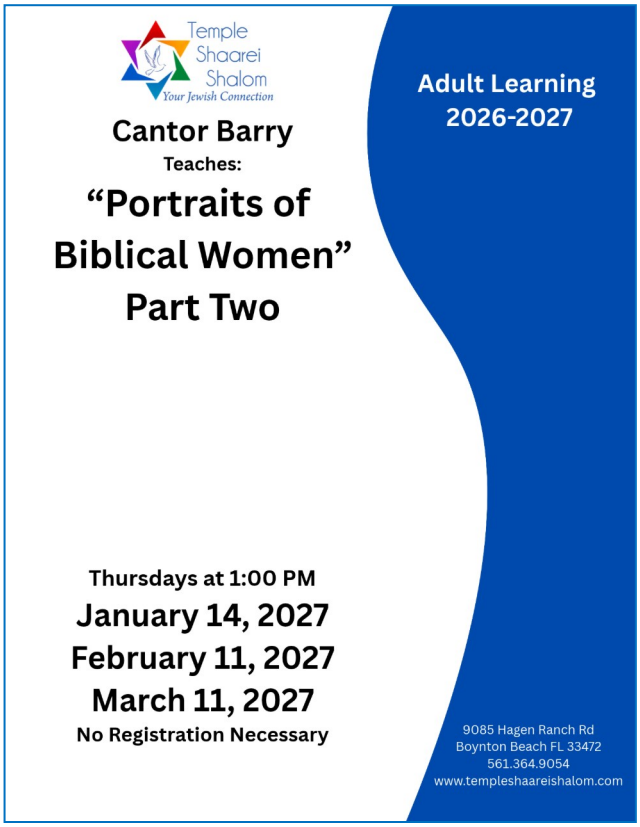
Last year, we spent time with some familiar figures, including Sarah and Rebecca, while also discovering some fascinating lesser-known characters. We explored the mysterious Witch of Endor, who was summoned by King Saul, and the tragic story of Jephthah's daughter, whose brief appearance in the Book of Judges raises profound questions about faith, family, and the status of women in the ancient world.

This year, we began in November with a closer look at Dinah, Jacob's daughter. Although her story in Genesis is brief and difficult, the generations of interpretations surrounding her reveal just how much there is to uncover when we give a biblical character the time and attention she deserves.

On January 14, our class resumes with an exploration of Judith, one of the most courageous women in Jewish literary tradition. A Jewish widow living during a time of great danger, Judith uses her intelligence, determination, and bravery to save Jerusalem from its enemies. Her story is particularly fascinating because it is not found in the Hebrew Bible. Instead, the Book of Judith is part of what is known as the Apocrypha—ancient religious writings that were not included in the biblical canon but have long been considered valuable sources of history, religious thought, and Jewish storytelling. The Greek word apokryphos means "hidden away" or "hidden things." And what better invitation could there be than the opportunity to uncover some hidden treasures of our tradition?

I hope you will join us as we continue discovering the women behind the stories, exploring the voices that have sometimes been overlooked, and finding new meaning in the texts that connect us to our past. You don't need to be a biblical scholar—just bring your curiosity and a willingness to look a little deeper!

Portraits of Biblical Women meets on these Thursdays at 1:00pm: January 14, February 11, and March 11 (see flyer below). Come help us uncover some of the mysteries of our history!



Education Director

Hanukkah is almost here and the calendar year is winding down. This is the time I tend to think about the people who have made my days brighter.

The Hanukkah story is about a tiny bit of oil that lasted far longer than anyone expected. I like that it doesn't ask for anything grand. Light gets passed along in small ways: smiling at someone who walks in feeling out of place, making room at the table, helping without being asked, or telling someone they matter.

I see this all the time in our Religious School. A student includes a classmate who is sitting alone. A teacher remembers that a child had a big game or a family vacation coming up and asks about it. The same is true of our PTO parents, who give their time and energy, often behind the scenes, to make our events and programs happen. None of these are particularly dramatic, but they're the reason people feel at home here.

There's a Jewish idea called hakarat hatov, recognizing the good. It asks us to notice what's already going well instead of fixating on what's missing. As you gather with family and friends this Hanukkah, I hope you'll take a moment to think about who has brought light into your life, and how you might do the same for someone else.

This holiday season I am grateful for our students, families, teachers, and staff. No community is built by one person or in any one moment. It comes from everyone showing up, again and again.

May your Hanukkah be warm and the new year brings more kindness and reasons to be together.

Happy Hanukkah and happy new year to all of our families!

From our President

Dr. Melissa Bowers

As we celebrate Hanukkah this month, we are reminded of the story of a small amount of oil that miraculously lasted eight nights. It is a story about faith, perseverance, and perhaps most importantly, the power of light.

But there is another lesson in those candles that I think is worth remembering. One candle can brighten a room, but when we bring all of our lights together, something truly special happens.

I think the same can be said about Temple Shaarei Shalom.

Every person who walks through our doors brings something unique. Some bring their energy and enthusiasm; others bring their time and talents. Some share their knowledge, some lend a helping hand, and others simply bring a smile and a willingness to connect. It doesn't matter how big or small the contribution is. Each one adds something to the light that makes our temple community what it is.

One of the things I love most about TSS is that there isn't just one way to be involved. Whether it's attending a service, joining a social activity, participating in a working group, volunteering for an event, or simply getting to know someone new, there are so many ways to become part of something bigger than us.

And sometimes, the best connections happen when we least expect them. We try something new, meet someone we might not have otherwise met, or discover a new interest we didn't know we had. Those little moments are what turn a group of people into a community.

As 2027 sits just around the corner, I hope we all find ways to bring a little more light into the lives of those around us. Reach out, get involved, invite someone along, or take a chance on something new. You never know how much your presence might mean to someone else.

After all, a menorah shines brightest when every candle is lit. Let's make sure the light each of us brings to TSS and the world around us shines just as brightly.

Wishing everyone a Hanukkah filled with light, laughter, and meaningful connections.

FIRST AMENDMENT….IS THERE NO LIMIT?

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof…

Why does the Constitution deal with religious freedom? Why is it the First Amendment? What does religious freedom mean? You do not need to be a constitutional scholar to enjoy this program…if you have had the privilege of hearing Dr. Watson speak, you know he will provide background and context as he shares his thoughts on this vitally important current topic.

Robert Watson, Ph.D. is Distinguished Professor of American History, Avron Fogelman Research Professor, and Assistant Director for the Center for Citizenship and Civility at Lynn University. In addition, he has published numerous books and scholarly articles, is a media commentator, and has led national conferences on the presidency.

We are trying a new format for our Scholar in Residence program this year. Dr. Watson will speak at 7:00pm. Following his presentation, we shall adjourn to round tables for snacks by 24 Karat Catering and follow up discussion.
